New glass pebble resin terrazzo

London terrazzo specialist Diespeker & Co has introduced a bespoke terrazzo range featuring coloured glass and ceramic pebbles.

The result offers an unusual mosaic style terrazzo that evokes the perception of nature within a bold contemporary design. The combination of bright colours together with the reflective quality of the glass pebbles and the shape of the ceramic pebbles creates an unusual, extravagant medium for creative interior design.

This luxury terrazzo is currently available in eleven different colourways from subtle brown to red, blue and green – click here to view the range \(RD068 to RD078\). The designs can be created in one colour or customers can create bespoke options using a combination of colours. Different effects are achieved by varying the number of pebbles for a dense or sparser look. With some pebbles flattish and others of a more conventional pebble shape, each terrazzo made will be totally unique.

The pebble terrazzo is made to order in Diespeker's factory. It's a labour-intensive process that involves firstly grinding the pebbles then laying them into position by hand. The method means it is perfectly possible to create either a random or more ordered design. Ceramic pebbles have been used in samples RD076, RD077 and RD078 to achieve a mesmerising large chippings effect.

Diespeker MD John Krause says: "Primarily we see the glass pebbles being used with our resin terrazzo as the perfect medium. For example, with resin we can create a panel as thin as 10mm, creating a transparent effect with the pebbles that will be visually stunning.

"However, there's no reason why we can't also cast the glass pebbles into cement terrazzo. As always, we are happy to discuss with customers which option will suit their project best."

The new glass pebble terrazzo designs are an ideal choice for chic countertops and panels and would create a stunning floor choice suitable for bathrooms in particular.

Due to the bespoke nature of this resin terrazzo, there are a limited number of samples available to order through Diespeker's website. To discuss a more bespoke option, please email sales@diespeker.co.uk or call 020 7358 0160.

ENDS

Diespeker & Co is a specialist supplier of natural stone and man-made materials for flooring, tiles, cladding, worktops and treads, for the commercial and domestic sectors.

The company was founded in 1881 in Hamburg and expanded into London where it was one of the first companies to offer terrazzo and mosaic to the UK market.

Diespeker offers a rare service at its factory in South East London where traditional hand-casting skills are employed to create bespoke designs. This enables the company to also match existing materials for refurbishment projects. The factory boasts the latest in Italian cutting and polishing machinery, as well as an impressive showroom displaying over 500 standard tile designs.

Standard materials are imported from trusted suppliers in Italy where they can be cut to a much thinner finish than in the UK if required.

The full service includes site surveys, technical support, drawing, supply and installation and an exceptional aftercare package.

Diespeker is proud to have supplied and installed marble, granite and terrazzo for many prestigious sites including the Royal Academy, Oxford University, London Coliseum, Paul Smith, Selfridges and Harrods, restaurants across the country, and innumerable international clients. We are also delighted to have assisted and supported cutting edge artists, sculptors and designers with their projects.
